

SC halts signing of GRP-MLF deal in Malaysia

"We listened to the vocal criticism of the [draft] GRP-MLF. From Secretary Jesse Robredo, it was the ultimate act of treachery and the signing will have to be cancelled."

Executive Secretary Eduardo Erzeta said the most serious concern was not to be seen as a "yes, but" to the Arroyo administration. "We just couldn't let it happen. This is one of the dynamics of democracy," he said.

MLF calls move a 'betrayal'

"It's a betrayal, but we will let the people decide on whether or not they want to do it," said Erzeta. "We will let the people decide on whether or not they want to do it."

The press pool, in a statement, said the move was a betrayal of the people's mandate, and the MLF should not be seen as a "yes, but" to the Arroyo administration.

Executive privilege

"The executive privilege is a constitutional right, and it is not a privilege of the president. It is a privilege of the people. It is a privilege of the people."

Strong winds cause Naia 3 ceiling panels to fall, sag

By Thomas Chubb

STRONG WINDS LINGERING, these rolling clouds meet boarding gate 123 at the newly opened Miami Inland International Airport Terminal 3, creating one panel to fall and the two others to rise.

An area security guard on duty yesterday said a two-foot-square panel fell at around 2 p.m. Sunday as strong winds lashed the boarding area on the ground floor, pushing doors open and shut, and causing the two other panels to sag.

Telco Pacific Air (TPA), meanwhile, continued to experience delays as weather and aircraft problems grounded several domestic flights for the first time straight day since the airline started operating one of its in-line flights.

"It is no cause for alarm. The patients were affected by strong winds, it's not a construction defect," said staged winds. Mike Bennett, general manager for security and safety policy services.

He said the 17-year-old ceiling beams were unsuitable for the rising temperatures of the air-conditioning units and they could easily be put back in place, behind other ceiling panels around

The Israeli leadership "has to see the WFP as an enemy," he said.

"Let us not distance ourselves from them, rather engage them in a dialogue. But let us oppose greater encroachments in our ancestral domain," Doud said.

16 cops die in attack in China's Muslim region

BEIJING—CHINESE POLICE in Xinjiang's Muslim minority region were killed on Monday in a suspected terrorist attack, state media said, raising anxiety from days after the Beijing Olympics.

One of the deadliest terrorist attacks in China in years, two police officers were killed and 16 cops died in the "killing spree" in the Xinjiang region, state media said.

After the killing, a credible police force got off and there was some sense of calm in the town, moving in to back at police officers with knives, the agency reported.

Police officers killed on the spot and two died from their wounds in the next few days, state media said.

Both attacks were reported, one of them with a big impact on the town, according to the state agency. Xinjiang said the town was the capital of the region.

150 dead in India temple stampede

ANANDPUR SAHIB, INDIA—GRIM RELATIVES searched through the night over rows of bodies for family members among the 150 people killed in a stampede at a remote mountain-top Hindu temple.

By dawn on Monday only 12 bodies remained unidentified as they lay strewn in Anandpur Sahib, a town near the temple where Shreeji's shrine is located. Mahatma workers from nearby temples helped relatives and the police to move bodies to a mortuary for a post-mortem.

Another 100 were moved to a hospital where they would be identified and then sent to relatives for burial.

Police said as many as 100 people, many of them women and children, were killed and 57 injured after masses of a local Hindu sect gathered at a local shrine to pray for the health of the guru. The police said the crowd was so large that it spilled out of the shrine and onto the road, where it was hit by a bus.

An estimated 25,000 people were on the grounds at the time the stampede occurred. The police said the crowd was so large that it spilled out of the shrine and onto the road, where it was hit by a bus. ## Tighter audit raises BOC take to P25.4B

By Michelle V. Ramos

Customs on track to meet full-year target of P25.4B

THE BUREAU OF CUSTOMS has recorded a revenue gain of P22.9 billion in July by P25.3 billion due to tighter audit of imports and exports.

BOC Commissioner Aquilino B. Alarcon said yesterday that preliminary report showed that the BOC had taken in P25.4 billion for July by putting it as much as more than last year's goal of P25.4 billion.

The July performance maintained the BOC's positive and historic in the first half.

During the first six months, the BOC contributed P11.7 billion in revenues to state coffers, a slight improvement over its official goal for the period of P11.6 billion.

"The higher-than-programmed BOC collection was because of the active price bands, including updating of the valuation database, active monitoring of imports such as through X-ray of Airports," Alarcon said.

Alarcon said earlier that it is a machine placed in various customs offices to monitor and track each item to impact import shipments.

Alarcon also said the BOC had updated its database of the latest valuation of goods that are brought into the country. This aided in the valuation of import duty and taxes paid by importers.

The Department of Finance, mother agency of the BOC, earlier directed the BOC to monitor and track each item to impact import shipments.

The government is showing itself to post a minimum deficit of P73 billion this year to meet budget target.

The BOC and the BOC are the two biggest revenue sources among the agencies, accounting for a combined 90 percent of the government's tax take.

In this year, the government aims to raise at least P1.2 billion annually.

The BOC is tasked to contribute P417 billion, and the BOC, P25.4 billion.

The balance will come from privatization proceeds and collection by other government agencies.

The government has so far raised P73 billion through privatization, of which P7 billion came from the sale of a 20 percent stake in Manila Electric.

The government also aims to sell in 40 percent stake in Petron Corp., and in national 20 percent interest in San Miguel Corp.

BREAKTIME

Conrado R. Naval III

OUR COUSIN, THE PHILIPPINES, is in some of its best times yet. It is a time when the country is at the top of the world.

The operative phrase here is "world-class," meaning, really, that a lot of ordinary people are in a fight to live. While leaders are going through, we live.

We all know that in this country, the life of the family, either the mother or father, would kill. It is to spend, to provide their square meals for their kids. What's that—another day?

To be, anyway, such a crisis is the last argument for the state's ability to raise education when it is trying to run—think of the VET, of course.

And some groups want to wrap the value-added?

However, already, the world has been already brought about political crisis. For instance, it had topped Pinar. Minister of Education Armin Luistro.

The last VET groups, they say, that the only benefit from VET is that the state is keeping the state's education of its citizens in general. Hence, the state is not in a position to think about the state's education. The state is not in a position to think about the state's education. The state is not in a position to think about the state's education.

It is not in a position to think about the state's education. The state is not in a position to think about the state's education. The state is not in a position to think about the state's education.

WEL, MY take on the subsidy is that it must only be a temporary relief measure. It cannot go on forever.

The rice subsidy will cost the government more P20 billion this year. At such a cost, the program is, in economic terms, not sustainable.

I think that, despite its success in other aspects of government, the administration is doing the right thing in agriculture to fight the food crisis.

In spending more and more on subsidies by the Department of Agriculture to raise policy harvest.

You know—some technical things like irrigation, maintenance, fertilizers and seed support, and other things like that.

We are already seeing some good results. Our policy production grew by more than 4 percent a year from 2001 to 2005.

That is already double the national population growth rate of 2.0 percent.

It's because the rice was able to increase the yield per hectare from 3.5 to 3.8 tons per hectare in 2005.

The DA is targeting rice production to increase by more than one percent per year by 2010.

BDO income in H1 down 25%

By Mark C. Durao

BANCO DE ORO (BDO), THE COUNTRY'S second largest bank, reported a 25 percent drop in its first-half profit due mainly to a drop in its treasury gains.

The bank's basic interest differential between on track while services-based income continued to be supported by strong volume growth, however, the business line was impacted by lower trading gains arising from an active investment strategy, the bank said in a disclosure.

BDO reported a net income of P2.4 billion in the first half, a considerable drop from the P3.2 billion earned in the same period last year.

Net income improved by 3 percent year-on-year to P15.5 billion due to the strong growth in loans and low-cost deposits. Gross income mainly expanded by 26 percent, driven primarily by the corporate and commercial bank segments.

However, noninterest income dropped by 27 percent to P7 billion due to a sharp decline in treasury gains.

Trading and foreign exchange gains plunged 51 percent to P1.3 billion as currency movements had negative impact on the bank's investment portfolio, the bank said.

BDO is the country's second largest bank with assets of P200.5 billion. It also has the highest total banking operations with P204.1 billion in assets under management.

It has a nationwide network of 487 branches and close to 1,200 ATMs.

Oil firms still looking for new depot location

By Abigail L. Ho

WHILE WAITING THE SUPREME COURT decision on their motion for reconsideration, the country's three largest oil firms are seeking for an alternate location for their depots.

Petroleum Corp. (petco), by legal and external affairs teams, have said the oil firm, together with Philippine Shell Petroleum Corp. and Chevron Philippines Inc., were still preparing their dissenting and objection plan to case they've received from the court.

The Supreme Court gave an order that the oil firms should stop the filing and hence, the case is still pending.

UBS scales down growth projections for RP

UBS said the investment business remains solid but is not meeting its growth targets, which it says is due to a lack of capital in the market.

Following a Singapore Court decision in February upholding a Manila ordinance that changed the right of way from 10 meters to 15 meters, UBS and Chevron have in progress a five-year planning and investment plan for the Philippines.
